Before the storm

The sky is still quiet when the boy starts tying the bamboo. The boats are coming in, the wind has not arrived yet, and nobody else on the beach seems worried. He knots each piece slowly and pulls it tight, because he has seen what happens to the ones who wait for the first drop of rain.

Families are the same with money. The best time to build an emergency fund, check your insurance, or look at your renewal is when nothing is wrong. Storms do not send notice. The ones who come through them are usually the ones who tied things down on a calm day.
